CONTENT:

January 2021 marks the 20th anniversary of the signing of the Washington Agreement between the USA and Austria. The agreement regulated issues of compensation and restitution for victims of National Socialism and constituted a milestone in Austria's efforts to come to terms with its Nazi past. In 2001, the General Settlement Fund for Victims of National Socialism was established on the basis of this Agreement to provide a comprehensive solution to open questions of compensation and to acknowledge Austria's moral responsibility for asset losses incurred by the Nazis' victims by making voluntary payments. Losses that had not (or not sufficiently) been accounted for under previous Austrian restitution and compensation measures were paramount.

To coincide with of the 20th anniversary of the Washington Agreement, the Final Report of the Claims Committee will be presented in book form. Spanning 562 pages, this publication documents the activities of the Claims Committee – an independent and internationally-composed body that decided on 20,702 applications for compensation of asset losses. Around 25,000 Nazi victims and heirs received compensation payments totaling approx. 215 million U.S. dollars.
